Usually, playing and exercising outside boosts a child's physical and mental health.

However, a heat index at or above 90°F, as identified by the National Weather Service, poses a significant health risk.

High temperatures and extreme heat can cause children to become sick very quickly in several ways. It can cause dehydration, heat exhaustion, heat cramps and heat stroke, which is a medical emergency. High heat can also contribute to irritability in children.

If you are going to be outside, there are several steps you can take to beat the heat and protect your child from heat-related illness and hazards: stay hydrated, dress lightly, wear sunscreen, plan for extra rest time, stay cool with water mists or swimming, and never leave a child in a car.
